A PRETTY WEDDING SUNDAY AFTERNOON

One of the prettiest society events of the season took place at one o'clock last Sunday afternoon when Miss Irene Hildreth and William Bond, both prominent young people of this city, were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Arkwright of St. Mary's Catholic church.

The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hildreth on West Henry Street, and was attended only by relatives and close friends of the young couple. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Pauline Hildreth, and the bridegroom by the bride's brother, Victor Hildreth. The parlors of the residence had been beautifully decorated for the occasion in roses and evergreens, and the bride carried a pretty bouquet of white roses. After the ceremony a delicious wedding lunch was served, and the couple received many silver and cut glass gifts.

The bridal party was escorted to the depot in Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Gibson's automobile, and amid showers of rice and congratulations Mr. and Mrs. William Bond boarded the southbound train for San Francisco and will spend several days visiting in the Bay cities. They will return to Ukiah and will make their home on North Oak Street.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hildreth, who have long been residents of this valley, and is an accomplished young lady. The groom has for several years been in the employ of the White House in this city, and both have many frends here who wish them the best of success and happiness.

NEW BALL GROUNDS AT STATE HOSPITAL

New base ball grounds are being arranged at the Mendocino state hospital, and when completed they will be the best and most modern grounds in the county. A large grandstand is being built and a special effort is being made to have the ground rolled until it is absolutely smooth and even. Lockers will be provided for the players and the diammond will be enclosed.

A game was played on the Talmage daimond last Sunday between the M. S. H. team and the clerks of Ukiah. The total score was fourteen to six in favor of Talmage.

NOTES ABOUT THE DOINGS AT COVELO

(Press' Special Srevice)

Claude Van Dyke of Ukiah is here for a few days vacation with relatives.

County Surveyor Guy Redwine spent a few days last week with friends and relatives in Covelo.

Miss Mary Underhill left Friday for a short stay in Berkeley. She will spend the remainder of her summer vacation in Philadelphia where she has a large acquaintance.

The Indian Reservation Lumber mill burned to the ground last week.

Miss Laura Riffe left Monday for Chico where she will spend her summer vacation with her parents.

The school children at the Indian Reservation will hold their annual picnic next Wednesday.

GOOD ROADS TO CLOVERDALE

Mr. and Mrs. George Richardson drove to Cloverdale and returned last Sunday in their big Speedwell touring car. They drove down over the mountain road from Hopland and returned via the River road. The road over the mountain is reported to be in very good condition, and according to Richardson the money solicited by the local Auto Club has been spent to good advantage.

NEW ARRIVALS AT THE COUNTY JAIL

Sheriff Ralph Byrnes returned the first of the week from the southern part of the state where he has been on business connected with his office. Sheriff Byrnes deserves much credit for his arrest of Edgar K. Dun Van, whom he caught in Modoc county. The crime with which Dun Van is charged was comimtted several months ago in Laytonville and the sheriff's office was not notified until a few weeks ago. Sheriff Byrnes immediately began work on the case and had located his man in a short time. He is now in the jail awaiting his hearing.

Caleo Del Vehio was brought over from Ten Mile the first of the week by Constable George Golden and was examined before Judge White in the superior court here and committed to the state hospital.

Frank Fabry was arrested Tuesday by Sheriff Byrnes for being drunk and disorderly and was sentenced to ten days or a fine of ten dollars by Judge Wilson. Fabry, having more time than money, is taking the days at the county jail.

SALO ACQUITTED BY JURY

Attorney T. J. Weldon of this city was called to Santa Rosa the latter part of last week where he, with Attorney Ross Campbell, defended E. Salo, who was charged with assault with a deadly weapon. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty and Salo was at once given his librety. The case was tried last Thursday and it was not until about 11:45 p. m. that the jury retired to deliberate until a few minutes past midnight when their verdict was returned. Judge J. Q. White of Ukiah presided.

BIDS FOR SCHOOL BONDS

Bids were recived Tuesday for the Willow School bonds as follows: Fred W. Stickney of Caspar $1551, B. O. Eddy of Ukiah $1530 and the Bank of Ukiah $1518. The bonds, amounting to $1500, were awarded to Fred Stickney, he having the highest bid.

UKIAH TEAM WILL PLAY BOONVILLE

A good ball game is anticipated on the local grounds next Sunday when the Ukiah nine will cross bats with the Boonville team. The grounds have been worked and are in much better condition than heretofore and there has been a general shake-up and rearrangement in the lineup of the Ukiah team.

Van Dyke will pitch in the game next Sunday, Lou Ruddick will play third base and Earnest Ruddick will take short stop. Hufft will catch behind the bat. The boys are said to put up a much stronger game with their new lineup and have been doing a great deal of practicing during the past week. Boonville will have practically the same team as last season when they claimed the championship of the county.

On Sunday, June 18th the Ukiah team will go to Willits for a return game with that team.

J W PICKLE MEETS WITH BAD ACCIDENT

J. W. Pickle was thrown from his wagon last Friday afternoon, when his horses became frightened, and sustained a serious fracture of the right leg. The accident occurred on the grade near Riverside.

Pickle had been in Ukiah and started home in the afternoon. While driving down the new grade south of Riverside his horses became frightened at a piece of paper lying in the road and started to run. The wheels of his wagon struck a small rut and Pickle was thrown from his seat and fell on his right leg, making a serious break. The horses were stopped before any great damage was done to the wagon and Dr. S. L. Rea of this city was called to care for the injured man.

Notes Gathered At County Offices

May was a busy month at the court house and the reports from the various officials show that they have been busy during the past four weeks. As a whole, the officials of Mendocino county are enterprising and progressive and are working in harmony for the betterment of the county government and for the interest of their employers, the tax payers.

County Treasurer George A. Johnson has a good report for last month which shows that there is now $6,841.86 more in the county's strong box than on May 1st. His report for the month is as follows: Balance on hand May 1st $191,831.52. The receipts for the month were $64,287.63, and the disbursements $57,445.77, leaving a balance onJune 1st of $191,673.38. Fees were received during the month from Clerk Hale McCowen $233.60, Recorder E. E. Holbrook $296.45, Sheriff R. R. Byrnes $15.40, Auditor C. W. Mathews $0.50, Justice E. M. Whitney of Willits $15 and Justice Byron G. Gowan of Philo $5.

Clerk Hale McCowen, whose fees amounted to $233.60, reports that twenty-four civil and criminal suits were commenced in the superior court of this county during the month, and that nine probate actions were filed. Fifteen marriage licenses were issued while only nine divorce suits were commenced, thus Cupid Hale Prather is again victorious.

Recorder E. E. Holbrook recorded 339 instruments during the month, of which twenty-one were certificates of birth and twenty-two were certificates of death. His fees for the month were $296.45, as against $268.35 for the month of April. Sheriff R. R. Byrnes is busy roping in the prisoners as usual and reports that 19 men were received at the county jail during May. Last year during the same month only eight men were captured and placed in jail. Ten prisoners were discharged during the month, leaving twelve county boarders on June 1st. The sheriff's fees for the month were $15.40.

Superintendent of Schools L. W. Babcock has been busy visiting the schools in the county the past month, and Mrs. Babcock has been attending to the many duties of that important office. Judge J. Q. White has been called out of the county several times during the past month to try cases and also had several important cases in the court here. District Attorney Robert Duncan is taking an important part in the Hayden murder case being tried in Weaverville, Trinity county, and during his absence J. C. Rudock is filling the office of District Attorney.

WET AND DRY TOPIC PERPLEXES BOARD

The board of supervisors have been facing a strenuous week on account of the new local option law. It is held by some that the state law supercedes the county law and that as a result all of the county is now wet. As a result several applications for liquor licenses were filed from dry territory.

In the absence of District Attorney Duncan the board applied to J. C. Ruddock who is acting for him. Ruddock's opinion instead of helping matters made things warmer for the board. Ruddock construes the Wylie law to be a prohibition law and that as a result all of the county is now dry and that when the liquor licenses expire on July 1 no more can be issued until an election is held and the territory voted wet. In the event of the territory going dry the saloon men would then have ninety days in which to open and dispose of their stock.

Assemblyman Held also appeared before the board and explained the view of the matter from the standpoint of the legislature. He claims that as the county law is in conflict with the state law that the county local option ordinance is of no effect and that the whole county is therefore wet.

He claims that the board is not bound by the result of the former elections and that they could issue licenses in dry territory.

Attorney C. M. Mannon was also called in and presented his views to the board. His interpretation of the law is that the wet and dry precincts remain as they are at present and that it will be necessary to hold a new election to make any change at all.

The board will hold a special session on the 19th to consider the matter further.

BIG POSTERS OUT FOR CELEBRATION

The big posters, advertising the celebration to be held here on July 2, 3, and 4th, have just been turned out from the presses in this office. They will be distributed and posted throughout Mendocino and Lake counties.

The program, as arranged on the big poster, promises to be very interesting and there are many attractive features for the celebration. There will be automobile races; athletic sports of all kinds; music by Willtis, Potter, Keller's and Ladies' band of Ukiah, parade with beautiful floats, horribles and growlers, childrens' parade with basket picnic and exercises at the grove, Indian war dance, medicine dance and fire eaters, grand mardi-gras ball with a confetti battle on the newly paved streets, street fare, promenade concerts, dancing on the streets and a general good time. Hon. C. H. Connick of Eureka will be the orator of the day.

The greatest crowd ever seen on the streets of Ukiah will be here during the first week of July and arrangements are being made to entertain the visitors.

EXERCISES FOR COVELO SCHOOL

(Press' Special Service)

COVELO, June 7—Commencement exercises for the Round valley union high school were held at Rohrbough's hall on last Thursday evening, June 1st. The hall was beautifully decorated with ivy and roses. The program was as follows: Invocation by Rev. Lewis; Piano solo, Prelude XV Chopin, by Helen Hogshead; Essay, "Life of Helen Keller," by Helen Terry; Trio, "Sweet and Low," by the Misses Edith Copeland, Helen Hogshead and Kathryn Kavanagh; Vocal Solo, "Till Dawn," by Gladys Fulton, accompanist Edith Copeland.

Miss Mary Underhill, principal of the high school, presented Helen Terry with a high school diploma, she being the only graduate for 1911.

Isaac Kemppe and Isaac Jacobson, both prominent residents of Fort Bragg, spent several days in town this week on a business visit. They report that times are lively in Fort Bragg and that they are looking forward to a remarkable development there in the future.

COUNTY PIONEER CALLED BY DEATH

Last Friday another of the pioneers of this county, Benjamin F. Hall, passed to eternal rest after an illness of several years duration and the remains were laid to rest in the Ukiah cemetery. Mr. Hall, who was 73 years old, had been failing for some time and his death was not unexpected. The funeral services were held from the residence of W. S. Van Dyke, on South School street, at 2:30 Sunday afternoon and a large number of friends were present to show their last respects to the deceased.

Benjamin Franklin Hall was born near Princeton in Bureau county, Illinois, on December 16th, 1838 and his life from his boyhood to the time of his death was that of a noble and honorable man. He had many hard struggles and trials during his life, coming here in the early days, and was formost in many desperate battles with the Indians. He was a kind and sympathetic man and was always first to assist his friends in their sorrows or trouble. He crossed the plains with his parents with ox teams and came to this valley in 1857. Later, his father purchased 1000 acres of land in Fallas valley where the family lived for several years.

In 1867 B. F. Hall left California and went to Nevada where he engaged in mining and from there he went to Montana where he followed mining for many years. In 1882 he returned to California and purchased a ranch near Round valley where he has since resided.

He is survived by one brother, Henry M. Hall, who now lives near Covelo, and one daughter, Mrs. W. S. Van Dyke, of this city. He had many friends among the early settlers here, only a few of whom remain, and who attended the funeral and escorted their old companion to his last resting place.

LET'S HAVE EXHIBIT AT THE EXPOSITION

(Special to the Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, June 2—The Panama-Pacific International Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915 will afford a rare opportunity to present to the hundreds of visitors the attractions and advantages of Mendocino county.

Each year thousands of colonists are brought from the East to make their homes in California. The holding of the Panama-Pacific Exposition means that in 1915 this number will be increased many times, and not only will home-seekers come to California from the East, but all of the countries of the world will contribute thousands of desirable home-seekers and sightseers. How it is best to grasp this opportunities to place the splendid resources of Mendocino county before these thousands is the question that concerns everyone most at this time. At its last session, the state legislature passed a bill authorizing boards of supervisors to levy a tax of 6 cents on each $100 for the purpose of raising funds for preparing and maintaining county exhibits at the exposition. Now that the way has been opened, it is extremely important that steps be taken to raise an amount of money sufficiently large to prepare and maintain a suitable exhibit.

A committee of the Panama-Pacific Exposition has been appointed to visit Mendocino county and to place before the board of supervisors the advantages to be derived from an exhibit of this kind. The board has been requested to set aside a day for the committee to appear and it is to be hoped that an early date will be named.

The people of the county are undoubtely in favor of being properly represented at the exposition, and the board of supervisors will probably take the matter up at an early date.

ENROUTE FOR EUREKA

Walter C. Morris, distributor of the Autocar of the Autocar in San Francisco, passed through town the first of the week in a new model twenty-four Autocar on his way to Eureka to attend the carnival. AUTO PLUNGES OVER STEEP EMBANKMENT

The first real automobile accident of the season occurred late last Sunday afternoon when John Brown's touring car plunged in to a deep washout in the bank of the road, near the Ruddick ranch south of town, and turned turtle. Fortunately the occupants of the car, who were Mr. and Mrs. John Brown and Mrs. Lucy F. Seawell, escaped uninjured and the car was not damaged to any great extent.

A party with three machines, J. H. Barker, Dr. G. W. Stout and John Brown, had been spending the day at the Duncan Springs resort, near Hopland, and it was late in the afternoon when they started toward home. The two former cars took the state hospital road and Brown thinking that he would surprise his friends by beating them into town, took the shorter route via the Cunningham ranch. All went well until they reached the small creek near the Ruddick place, where the car skidded and the wheels ran into a deep washout. Brown, who was running without gas lights, could not see that he was driving so close to the deep gully. The car turned over and Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Seawell were thrown out. He stayed with the machine, and fortunately all escaped uninjured. The ground near there is soft sand, and had it not been for this someone would probably have been seriously injured.

The party walked to the Ruddick residence where they phoned to Dr. Stout, who in the meantime had arrived in town, and he brought them home in his car. The disabled automobile was brought into town Monday morning and will be repaired. Aside from a few cratches and the springing of the front spindles, the car was not damaged.

Although this road was in very good repair last season, it has been in poor condition this year and has been little traveled by automobiles. The motorists report that the road on the west side of the river is the best route to Hopland at the present time. Besides being over a mile shorter the roadbed is in better repair and much smoother than on the east side of the river.

KING OF CLOUDS IN BALLOON ASCENSION

Great preparations have been made at the Hotel Riverside by the genial proprietor, Joe Ainslie, for the balloon ascension there next Sunday. Godfrey, who is well known in the southern part of the state as a cloud king, will arrive today and have his apparatus in order for his daring balloon ascension and parachute drop Sunday. He made an ascension at Alturas last week and the following telergam was sent to Mr. Ainslie by the City Marshal there. "Godfrey's ascension and parachute jump the greatest thing ever seen here." Letters and cards have been received from other parts of the state regarding Godfrey's ascensions, and he is recognized as one of the best and most daring aviators in the state.

Professor Godfrey is the present holder of the western record for altitude won in open competition at Spokane, Washington on November 5, 1902. On this occasion he ascended to the tremendous heighth of 10,300 feet, making a spectular parachute descent from this altitude and establishing a record still unequaled. He is well and favorably known throughout the entire northwest, particluarly so in Modoc and adjacent counties, and the continued success which has marked every one of his long series of professional exhibitions is an absolute guarantee that this will be an event to be remembered for years. The entire paraphernalia to be used in this ascent, including the balloon and parachute, has been manufactured by Prof. Godfrey in person during the past months and is entirely new and up to date in every respect. The ballon has a capacity exceeding 50,000 cubic feet.

Mr. Ainslie was very fortunate in securing Prof. Godfrey for this ascension and the people will have an opportunity to witness something new to this part of the country. Joe says he has made preparations to care for over 2000 people, and as it is under his personal supervision everyone is sure to have a good time. Lunch and all kinds of soft drinks will be served in the dance hall and the people are invited to go early and spend the day enjoying the pleasures of Riverside. 25 cents will be charged for admittance to the field. No children will be allowed unless accompanied by their parents or guardians.

Ukiah Farmers' Club

Last Saturday the Farmers' Club held a very interesting meeting. Mr. Mower was to make an address on Farming conditions in France as compared with the United States. Three was so much business to be attended to and the interest so keen that the discussion was protracted until past adjournment time so that Mr. Mower's address had to be postponed until next meeting.

The Poultry Committee, Messrs. Carroll, Thomas, Roach and Aldrich reported through Mr. Carroll and Mr. Thomas that the Ukiah Poultry Association had been organized and voted to become an auxillary to the Farmers' Club. Our committee had considered every possible solution to the matters involved and had finally been forced to the concluison that the only way to handle the problem was to organize the poultrymen and conduct their business themselves.

Messrs. Carroll and Thomas further reported that arrangemntes had been made with Mr. C. H. Kent to act as Secretary and Treasurer for the Association and receive all eggs. Mr. Kent has turned over his back room, which has a side entracne, and there the poultrymen deliver their eggs all packed in cases or half cases, ready to ship. The consignee is instructed to make separate account-sales of each case by number so that Mr. Kent can easily pay to each member just what his eggs bring. The shipments for the first month will likely exceed $1000.

The hotels reported that because of the eight hour law it is impossible for them to set any more evening banquets and therefore cannot serve the farmers as has been previously announced. The Club decided for this reason to hold a big barbecue and picnic down on the river. A committee was appointed and has already put under way plans for a great affair.

Clark's grove, just below the bridge has been secured and tables will be arranged to serve 500 or more people.

We want it thoroughly understood that this banquet is for every farmer in the valley. To us the word farmer includes every producer of farm commodities: hops, grain, stock, fruit, grapes, boultry and all the rest. We not only invite the farmers to attend, we insist that it is their duty to attend. We want you there and you need to be there. A few people from town will be invited but the Farmers' Club has not yet undertaken to provide a celebration for the town. This is strictly a farmers' affair.

There will be speaking in the afternoon. Two excellent men from our south have been provided. Perhaps there will be another secured this week. Now Mr. Farmer, who ever you are, put your work in shape to take Saturday, June the 24th as a holiday. The committee are open to suggestions and donations of fat livestock. The committe are Endersby, Waugh, German, Richey and Bernhard.

Nearly 60 grape growers have signed up for the winery. The President of the Company will be with us next Saturday to begin plans for building.

Mr. McCracken has been appointed a committee on boxes. The plan is to buy the car load from the lowest bidder for first qaulity.

DISASTROUS FIRE SWEEPS CLOVERDALE

A fire of last Thursday night destroyed about $12,000 worth of business property in Cloverdale before the flames were under control. It started in E. A. Cooley's furniture store shortly after closing time in the evening, and although the firemen were quick to respond, the interoir of the building was belching with flames by the time the water could be turned on. So rapidly did the builings burn that in a very few minutes it was seen that Cooley's furniture store, Miss Nellie Shelford's millinery store and I. S. Lewis' real estate office were doomed and the attention of the firefighters was given to the adjoining property.

The cement block building owned by Dr. C. H. Smith, adjoining the Cooley building, protected property in that end of the block although the roof and interior of this building was damaged to the extent of about $500 or $600. Other buildings in the rear of the Cooley property were destroyed. But little insurance was carried on any of the property and the total loss will be at least $9,000.

EVANGELIST COMING TO BAPTIST CHURCH

J. Bruce Evans, the noted evangelist, who was to begin meetings last Sunday at the Baptist church was unable to be here on account of his voice giving out. He had been speaking for several weeks in an open tent and his voice was in such a shape that it was necessary for him to take a rest of several weeks.

Mr. Evans is to be here next Sunday, however, and will speak at the Baptist church morning and evening and will continue the meetings every night thereafter for two weeks.

IN MEMMORIAM

In Memory of Our Beloved Sister Mary Taylor.

It is fitting that we should pause for a few moments at this time to express our love and appreciation and do honor to the memory of her who passed to that msyterious realm from whence no traveler e'er returns.

Our Golden Chain has been broken, one by one the links have fallen away. We miss her genial presence, her kindly smile, her cordial hand clasp. No more do we hear the sound of her voice her eyes are closed in sleep and her footsteps are quieted forever. She has gone from our presence, but the good she has done remains with us.

Through life she was guided by the principals of our Order, and she is numbered among those who are fairest among thousands, altogether lovely.

In the midst of life we are reminded by death, in the midst of pleasure often comes pain, after the greatest joy often comes the keenest sorrow.

Let us live that when our summons come to join the throng, we stand in the presence of our maker that He may say to us, well done, thou good and faithful servant.

The Order of the Eastern Star helps us to live the better life, not only here but to fit us for the life to come and how we may help our friends how to do good unto others.

On the final day we will not be rewarded on account of our riches or fame, our social position or influence, but for the good we have done. Today we are guided by the Eastern Star to the place where lives the glorified Redeemer, to the mansion not made by hands eternal in heaven.

Let us then follow this star and at last may we all gather an unbroken family around the mercy seat.

"Where only the Master shall praise us, and only the Master shall blame, and no one shall work for money, and no one shall work for fame, but each in the joy of his working and each in his separate star, shall do the thing as he sees it, For the God of things as they are."

The Human Heart

The heart is a wonderful double pump, through the action of which the blood stream is kept sweeping round and round through the body at the rate of seven miles an hour. "Remember this, that our bodies will not stand the strain of over-work without good, pure blood any more than the engine can run smoothly without oil." After many years of study in the active practice of medicine, Dr. R. V. Pierce found that when the stomach was out of order, the blood impure and there were symptoms of general breakdown, a tonic made of the glycerio extract of certain roots was the best corrective. This he called

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

Being made without alcohol, this "Medical Discovery" helps the stomach to assimilate the food, thereby curing dyspepsia. It is especially adapted to diseases attended with excessive tissue waste, notably in convalescence from various fevers, for thin-blooded people and those who are always "catching cold."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps for the French cloth-bound book of 1008 pages. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

CHAPTER XIX.

THE ROUNDUP.

IT was only the car that was disabled. Beyond a severe shaking up neither Patricia nor Blount was seriously hurt. Recovering from the shock and being assured of Patricia's wholeness and his own, Blount sprang out to see what the collision had done to the car. The inspection was brief. With the front axle bent, the radiator crushed and one cylinder of the engine broken, the little car was safely out of commission.

"We're done for," he said shortly, helping his companion down from the driving seat.

Patricia was still trembling and pale, and he thought that the accident was accountable.

"Do you mean—that we can't—go on to the city?" she quavered.

"Not unless we walk, and it is exactly fifteen miles. I happened to notice the speedometer record on the roadster when we turned around here last Sunday."

"What shall we do?" she asked when the improbability of any timely rescue made itself apparent.

Blount looked at his watch. It was already a few minutes past 3 o'clock.

"We'll sit down and wait for somebody to come along and rescue us," he said, striving to say it lightly. "I'm sure we ought to be glad and thankful that it is no worse. We stood a good chance of being killed, both of us."

She shuddered and said: "I might have stopped sooner. There—there was time, don't you think?"

Evan had thought so, and he was regarding her curiously. There had been many motoring experiences in their acquaintance of a year and not a few hazards, and he had more than once rejoiced in her cool presence of mind in the face of sudden danger.

"I wondered a little that you didn't," he ventured to say. "I never saw you hesitate before."

The look that she gave him was pathetically pleading.

"I stopped—just one little instant to think—of your father—and—and those terrible papers in your pocket and what was going to happen if you should reach Judge Hemingway in time, Evan," she confessed brokenly. "Can you ever forgive me?"

It was a moment for the brushing aside of obstacles once and for all, and he took her in his arms—would have done it if the lonely Quaretaro road had been the busiest street in the capital.

"You are my brave, loyal darling," he said. And because she let him say it and hid the face, from which the cold pallor had suddenly fled, on his shoulder the political struggle and everything pertaining to it became as things of naught and the lonely road the way to paradise.

The silence of the immensities held them for a moment—a golden silence for the lover, but a moment of keen self reproachings for the maiden sobbing on his shoulder.

"Oh, I don't know how I could have done it—but I did!" she wept. "I—I was ac-actually glad when I saw the tree. I didn't have the courage to—to upset the car in the ditch."

Again he comforted her, and the political venalities withdrew into a still remoter region.

"It was to be," he said. "That is what the tree was put here for—to stop us."

She looked up at that.

"Why, that is so, isn't it? There are no trees growing around here—none at all. Who did it, Evan?"

Blount shook his head sadly. "There is only one person in the world who could have any strong reason for stopping us," he asserted. "I can't imagine how my father managed it in the short time at his disposal. That tree has been dragged down out of the little canyon since we passed going north. You can see the trail of it in the road."

"Please, Evan," she pleaded, "don't ask me to believe that your father planned it! Why, we might have been killed outright, both of us!"

"I know," he returned gloomily, "but—hello, here comes our rescue!"

It was rather a figure of speech than an assurance. Around a turn in the canyon road came three horsemen pointing for the main highway and ambling gently. They were hardly within hailing distance before Blount recognized his three waylayers of the night of mysteries in the Lost River mountains, with Barto in the lead.

"Howdy?" said the timber looker, riding up to hang with one knee over the saddle while he grinned at the two castaways. "Lost out again, Mr. Blount? Couldn't make out to run your chug wagon over that there pine tree, eh?"

"Did you put the tree in the road?" snapped Blount, with rising anger.

"I reckon we did," was the cool reply, "and it was one job too. Had to drag it f'm more'n a mile down the gulch with the horse ropes."

There was material for an explosion, but Blount controlled himself.

"By whose orders did you do it?" he demanded.

"The boss'."

"Mr. Hathaway?"

"Not on your life. It was the big boss this time."

Blount's quick glance aside at his companion was a sorrowful "I told you so," and he did not question Barto further.

"Well," he said, turning back to the outlaw, "what is to be done with us?"

Barto pursed his thick lips. "If the lady can make out to ride one of the bronc's," he began, "there's a right comfortable little shack of a hotel at the head of the gulch, and"—

"But we are on our way to the city," Blount interposed, still trying to master his impatience.

The timber looker shrugged.

"All right. I reckon there ain't no law ag'inst your walkin' or settin' down to wait till somebuddy comes along. But it might be a good while."

Blount turned to Patricia.

"Shall we wait?" he asked, and she nodded quickly, with a look in her eyes that he could not interpret.

"I don't believe we care to go and look for your shack hotel," he said to the road blocker.

Barto swung straight in his saddle and fell into the attitude of one listening. Then the grin became a menace, and he spoke sharply.

"Gimme them papers you got in your pocket and do it sudden!" he commanded. "Then you can stay here till the cows come home if you want to. Quick, I say!"

"No," Blount said crisply.

Instantly Barto's pistol was out.

"Give 'em up!" he shouted. "Shell 'em out or"—

The diversion came stormily. Around the curve from the north—the curve that had so lately been Patricia's undoing—came a huge touring car, with a big man at the wheel, a veiled woman in the mechanician's seat and the tonneau crammed with armed men.

"SHELL 'EM OUT, OR"—

Barto snapped his pistol at the oncoming car, and when the weapon missed fire he wheeled his horse to the canyon road, up which his two companions were already urging their mounts. Two seconds later the big car had stopped at the tree barrier, and six men with Winchesters were popping the halt signal at the flying highwaymen. It was speedily effective, and when the game was bagged the senator swung down from the driving seat of the big Italian car and gave his orders briefly.

"Take these fellows up yonder to the hotel at the canyon head and see that they're kept out of mischief till tomorrow night, Granger," he said, singling out the leader of his tonneau squad. "Then tell the gentleman you'll find bossing things up there that the jig is up and he may as well come to the city. He'll find me at the Inter-Mountain when he wants to talk it over."

A little engineering feat, made possible by the big car's towrope, soon cleared the way, and when the great car, with the two women in the tonneau and Evan in the seat beside his father, was devouring the miles in the straightaway race to the city the young man said what was due.

"I was blaming you for the tree and for Barto's attempt to get those affidavits away from me," was what he broke the humming silence to say, and the senator nodded.

"I guess it was pretty lucky we had our ears to the cut-in on McVickar's private wire up yonder at Wartrace," he said, but that was all that he said.

The courthouse clock was just striking 4 when the huge touring car, with its radiator sizzling hot, came to a stand before the entrance to Judge Hemingway's chambers.

"You're still in time, son," said the senator quietly.

But Evan Blount made no move to get out of the car.

"Was I jumping at conclusions, dad?" he asked half shamefacedly.

"A little that way—just a little that way," was the gentle reply. "You see, Gryson did sure enough turn traitor this morning when he gave you those affidavits. He'd had a quarrel with Mr. McVickar. Every one of those crooked names means a vote for your railroad, son. That was why I told you you'd better not holler out about it. It was against your own side."

Evan Blount's hesitation might have been measured by a clock tick.

"Then there is all the more reason why"— he began, but his father was once more putting the clutch in.

"No," he interrupted, still in the same gentle tone; "don't let's jump at any more conclusions, Evan. Wait just a little while. There's more to come—and I shouldn't be surprised if it came before dinner time."

It did come before dinner time—came when a dust covered car driven at reckless speed tore in over the northern road and was pulled up with a jerk at the Inter-Mountain entrance to let Mr. Hardwick McVickar debark and hurry to the clerk's desk.

"Senator Blount? Yes, he's in his rooms; he said you were to come right up," said the clerk, and, without stopping to strip off his dust coat, the vice president hastened to an elevator.

What took place behind the closed door of the sitting room in the Blount suit is not a matter of record, and Evan Blount, sitting beside Patricia in Mrs. Blount's private sitting room and concluding a lasting peace with his father's wife, was too happy to care very much. But after a time the summons for which he had been waiting came, and he went—almost reluctantly—to join his father in the room of conference.

"Has Mr. McVickar gone?" he asked, finding his father sitting alone.

"Yes; he's gone—gone to order out his car and go back to Chicago," was the slow spoken reply. Then, with the quizzical smile wrinkling at the eye corners, "How does the political wrestle strike you by this time, son?"

"It strikes me that I haven't been in it—not even in the outer edges of it, dad. Isn't that about the size of it?"

"Oh, no; you've been doing good work—mighty good work, for your company. McVickar recognizes it. You've helped out in the only way that help could come in this campaign. You've worked up a good, healthy public sentiment in favor of a square deal for everybody. McVickar was fixing to lose it all; cooking the registration lists and buying votes and making deals right and left, the same as usual. But it's all off now, and he's gone, and we're going to have one clean, straight up and down election, son. The 'machine' says so."

"The machine?" queried the younger man.

"Yes; you didn't know that a machine organization could be put to any really righteous use, did you, boy? But this is one time when it has gone in to knock out the crookedness, big and little. Listen, son. When you wired me that you were coming out here I lay awake nights thinking how I'd put you in training and then when the time came I'd help you up into the saddle and make you the boss of the roundup, as I'd been. Want to hear the rest of it?"

Blount nodded.

"Then it came over me all of a sudden that I'd been as crooked as a dog's hind leg; that we'd all been crooked. Not that I'd ever taken a dollar for my personal pocket, for I haven't, but I've bought and sold and dickered and schemed with the best of 'em and the worst of 'em, just as McVickar's been doing for the past two months. Then I asked myself if I'd like to see you wallowing in the same mudhole, and—well, Evan, you may have a son of your own some day, and then you'll know. I thought I'd try you a little at first, and I did—that first day out at Wartrace. When you ripped out at me that day I made up my mind right then and there that I'd put the whole power of the 'machine,' as you call it, into one campaign for a clean election and a square deal."

"My heavens!" ejaculated the son. "And I've been fighting you and your organization at every turn!"

"No, you haven't," was the quick rejoinder. "You've been fighting graft, and that was what you thought you were hired to do. McVickar wasn't playing just fair with you. He gave you your job in the first place to take you away from me, but you've been in the hands of your friends right from the start, Evan. It was the organization that gave you all these chances to preach the new gospel of the square deal. It was the organization that pushed Hathaway up against you, so that you'd know that the railroad people were running around in the same old circles, hollering for justice and doing everything they could to defeat the ends of justice—muddying the spring because, they say, they don't know what else to do.

"Lastly, it's the organization that's going to see to it that your word to the people of this state is made good, son. Maybe we'll never be able to do it again, but this one time we shall do it. Gordon is going in by the biggest majority ever given to a governor of old Sagebrush, and the legislature will be five to one in favor of the square deal."

The younger man left his chair and walked to one of the windows to stand, looking down upon the lights of the busy street. When he turned again it was to say, "I don't see where I am to break in, dad."

"You have already broken in. While the legislature is going to be anti-corporation, it is also going to be fair when it finds out that all the railroad deals have been called off and canceled. You're the man to show the lawmakers that this has actually been done. McVickar made a hard and fast point of that when he consented to wipe the slate clean and go away and let us run our politics to suit ourselves. He made me promise to put it up to you fair and square, with a handsome increase in salary and an iron-clad agreement to back up every claim you should make when you assert that the railroad company will fire the first man that is caught evading the laws. That's what I've been fighting for in this campaign, Evan, and it's what you must fight for."

The son took the two steps necessary to reach the father's chair and held out his hand.

"I'm with you, dad," he said heartily. "I'll stay, and I'll make Mr. McVickar respect me and my principles before I'm through with it. But I'm still a little bit afraid that you and your kind are a menace to civilization and a free government. You won't mind my saying that, will you?"

"Lawzee gracious, no! Say anything you like, son, or, rather, let me say something else first. How about this 'career' business of Patricia's? Have you fixed that up yet?"

Evan shook his head despondently.

"She's going home with her father in October," he said, then: "Do you know what she did today, dad? She ran the little red car into that tree intentionally so I couldn't get back here in time to use those affidavits which she and I both supposed would incriminate you."

"God bless her loyal little soul!" said the senator. "I hadn't told her what I was trying to do; but, Lord love you, she knew—you trust a woman for knowing, every time, son. And now one more thing. Have you come to know Honoria any better in these last few days?"

"Yes; much better within the last hour, dad."

"Good. That does my old heart a heap of good, son. Let's go and get those two good women and take 'em down to dinner; then we'll drive back to Wartrace and get ready to touch off the fireworks when the returns come in. I tell you, son, tomorrow's election is going to be a regular old fashioned, heave 'em up and keep 'em a-going landslide!"

Evan Blount was turning to go—back to the inner sitting room, where Patricia was—when he suddenly remembered little Blenkinsop.

"Don't let that worry you for a minute, son," said the man who seemed to be at the heart of everything that was happening. "Half an hour after you left Blenkinsop this morning that stuff that they had stolen from your safe and then garbled up to suit themselves was all killed. When I told Blenkinsop over the phone that there wouldn't be any crooked lists used tomorrow—that he was merely fixing to put himself on record as the biggest liar on two continents—he came down.

CHAPTER XX.

THE LANDSLIDE.

CONTRARY to all expectation, the election proved to be one of the quietest ever known in the Sagebrush State. A few editors there were, like Blenkinsop of the Daily Capital, who later on maintained that it was merely another triumph for the machine, but there was no gainsaying the result. The reform ticket, with or without the help of the machine, was elected by sweeping majorities everywhere, and Gantry, sitting in his office and reading the wire returns as they came in, gasped for breath and swore despairingly over each fresh batch of messages.

At Wartrace Hall the Hon. David turned to his son.

"Well, Evan, are the tangles all straightened out for you now?" he asked gently.

"Just about all of them," laughed Blount. He had spent a very happy evening, chiefly because Patricia had been occupying the other half of the small divan he had dragged out to face the fire. "But I'm still unalterably opposed to the machine in politics," he added.

The senator laughed silently.

"Call it 'organization' instead of 'machine,' son, and you've got the power that moves the civilized world today. You've heard me called the 'boss' from the time Gantry had his first talk with you back yonder in Massachusetts. Call me a man with friends enough to make me a sort of leader in the old home state and you've got it about right. I don't say that I've always used the power justly. The Lord knows I'm no more infallible than other people. But, as I said to you yesterday, son, no matter what you've heard or who said it, I've never used the power to fatten my own pocketbook. I've bought and trafficked and bargained—I don't deny it—but only when it seemed as though the end justified the means."

"But the end never justifies evil means, dad," was the son's steadfast rejoinder. Then he looked up quickly from his place beside Patricia. "Is that the secret of all the invitations I've been getting?"

The humorous crow's feet were wrinkling at the corners of David Blount's eyes.

"I reckon so, son," he admitted. "You have been in the hands of your friends—and they're my friends—right from the start. Mighty near everything you have done has been scheduled for you."

It was just here that the professor excused himself and stumped off to bed. Mrs. Honoria signaled to her husband and vanished in her turn. A few minutes after she had gone the senator rose and threw a fresh stick on the fire. Then he came to stand before the two on the little divan.

"Son," he said gravely, "you've got your work cut out for you, and it's a good sized job. When the legislature meets you've got to go in single handed and alone and get a handful of reasonable laws passed for your railroad. You're going to have a hard fight, and there'll be times when you'll long with all your soul for some good, clean hearted little woman to go to for comfort and counsel. Of course I know that Patricia here has got another job, but"—

The senator had been out of sight and hearing for five full minutes when the young man reached over and took the hand that was lying nearest him.

"Yesterday afternoon, Patricia, when I had right and reason and logic on my side, your woman's intuition found the truer path. I know I am only one and your poor people are many, but I am still selfish enough to"—

"WE MUST LIVE OR DIE FOR EACH OTHER."

She looked up quickly, and the beautiful eyes were shining.

"We can't learn everything all at once, Evan," she said, breaking in upon his pleading. "There was one moment yesterday when I learned the greatest thing of all. It was the moment when I saw the tree lying across the road. I knew then that I—that I"—

"I know," he said gently; "you knew that we must live or die for each other. You have heard what my father has said. I can't walk in the way he has marked out for me without you, Patricia."

With a swift little love impulse she lifted his hand and pressed it to her cheek.

"You needn't, Evan, dear," she said simply.
